QUICK REFERENCE - SWINE TRACEABILITY REGULATION

The Swine Traceability Regulation under the Animal Health Act requires applicable parties (e.g. shippers, transporters or receivers) to record and report movements of swine, including deadstock, within, into and out of Alberta.

June 2014 amendments included:

1) Reporting has expanded to incorporate all movements, rather than only farm-to-slaughter; and
2) The regulation also applies to deadstock.
